Dear Betty,

Enclosing the snapshots of Jan + Warren taken at the Kim Der Reunion. They don't do justice to the camera operator — me, what with the background and the camera. So, I hope you can use them.

Sometimes it's such a shame our world gets so busy, cousins can never get together except for moments. It's always fun to be with you.

Love Doris

Thank You for the photo.
My mom enjoyed it before she got bad. I have it now
as I try to keep up some with the family geneology, but I am not as good as she was.

Mom left us very peacefully.

Sincerely,
Charlotte Ellis

HOW TO MEET SORROW
by Norman Vincent Peale

Nothing that God ever ordained is bad. Therefore, though it is painful, God's goodness is nevertheless to be found in sorrow. His goodness is given to your loved one who has gone and it is given to you who remain.

Never say, I have lost my wife, my husband, my child, my brother or sister. Remember the words of the poet, "Love can never lose its own." They are merely living in a new dimension and are not very far away. You have not lost that loved one.

"Where is my loved one?" the sorrowing heart asks. And the answer is a simple one. Your loved one is in the Father's house of many mansions and is surrounded by love and beauty, and is well and strong and happy. Just tell yourself he or she is all right, quite all right.

When sorrow comes, give normal expression to your grief. Do not try to bottle it up and contain it. God made tears for a purpose; and that was to relieve. A tear is agony in solution.

Don't be ashamed of your grief or try to repress it. Cry it out and pray it out; and peace will come.

Perhaps the greatest healing of sorrow is to be found in your faith. Repeat some of the great words of Jesus. He understands your sorrow. Use such words: "I am the resurrection and the life, sayeth the Lord." "He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live . . . Whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die."
